I. Results and key performance indicators

1. Since the second regular session of the Executive Board took place, in September 2013, an intensive process has been undertaken to develop the baselines and targets. Various approaches have been used for the different levels of indicators. Following consultation with partners, and giving particular emphasis to programme countries, UNICEF reviewed and in some cases updated the indicators contained in the present document, paying attention to their measurability, strategic nature, and compliance with results-based management criteria. The review helped to reduce the number of indicators by over 20 per cent in 2014, compared to the number presented as part of the Strategic Plan in 2013.

2. The terminology used for the indicators is consistent with the guidance provided by General Assembly resolution 67/226 of 21 December 2012 on the quadrennial comprehensive policy review (QCPR) of operational activities for development of the United Nations system. The terminology also reflects a shared approach with other United Nations organizations, including the United Nations Development Programme, the United Nations Population Fund, and the United Nations Entity for Gender Equality and the Empowerment of Women (UN-Women).

3. Since results at the impact level reflect collective action of States with the support of development partners, it would not be appropriate for UNICEF to propose targets or time frames unilaterally. Instead, baselines, targets and time frames in the Strategic Plan at impact level have been included whenever they already exist in global commitments such as the Millennium Development Goals, the United Nations General Assembly Political Declaration on HIV/AIDS, and World Health Assembly resolutions. In cases in which UNICEF is contributing to impacts for which no target has yet been agreed at a global level, UNICEF will populate the impact level of the results matrix after targets have been agreed through processes such as the development of the Sustainable Development Goals. Even where targets do not yet exist, or where no milestones have been identified for 2017, UNICEF will report impact-level changes to its Executive Board as data become available.

4. At the outcome levels, the targets are again the product of shared action. Whenever possible, they reflect globally agreed targets. Where no global targets exist, UNICEF has engaged with key stakeholders at national level, and national monitoring systems will be responsible for assessing the current situation and expected progress in 2014-2017. The targets listed below thus reflect ambitious but achievable estimates of the progress expected by the end of the strategic plan period.

5. The results framework also proposes various forms of data disaggregation that will be tracked by UNICEF (e.g., female/male, rural/urban, wealth quintile). It should be noted, however, that not all countries produce disaggregated data for all indicators. UNICEF will advocate with and support national partners to progressively develop their methods to collect disaggregated data so that monitoring and tracking of indicators is meaningful for the overall purpose of reaching the most disadvantaged. Additional disaggregation — such as by ethnicity, subnational area, disability or other characteristics — will be collected and analysed at the national level as appropriate and feasible.

6. The output level reflects UNICEF contributions most directly. Accordingly, the output indicators measure only those results achieved with UNICEF support. To set output targets, UNICEF involved all its country offices to determine the current status on indicators that reflect a relatively strong association between UNICEF and the results measured. As with the outcome level, the targets are considered ambitious but achievable, and the forms of disaggregation are included in the framework. Each year, reporting will assess the progress toward the targets.

7. Given the unpredictability of humanitarian situations, setting targets for indicators in this area involve a different process. The annual Humanitarian Action for Children report contains annual targets reflecting the latest knowledge regarding humanitarian situations. Estimating baselines for humanitarian situations at the outcome and output levels is not possible, since baselines depend on the humanitarian situations that may arise. UNICEF will report on the number of people reached in areas targeted with UNICEF assistance at the output level and will report the number of countries that meet country-defined targets for each humanitarian situation.

8. A comprehensive analysis of the risks, assumptions and mitigation measures as well as the elements of the theory of change for all outcomes and outputs have been outlined in a supplementary programme note that is available separately for information and will be periodically refined.

9. The updated status of indicators will be reported globally each year, and support will be provided to strengthen monitoring systems in countries to generate the required information. For indicators that rely on nationally representative household surveys, the status at the country level will be updated every three to five years on average. Additional indicators will also be aggregated and reported in a “data companion” that is developed each year to accompany the annual report of the Executive Director of UNICEF. The data companion to be issued in 2014 will aggregate the status of commonly used indicators from all relevant country programmes on the completion of key activities (e.g., training completed, supplies provided).
